Maetrics announces new president

Steve Cottrell to lead international life sciences consulting company

Indianapolis – (March 10, 2015) – Maetrics, the global leader in life sciences consulting, today announced that Steve Cottrell, previously vice president of sales, will assume the role of company president.

Cottrell has demonstrated commendable success since joining Maetrics in 2013. Prior to that, Cottrell served in executive positions at DOCS, a division of the global clinical research organization ICON plc; i3 Research, a division of United Health; as well as inVentiv Health and AAI Pharma.

"We are fortunate to have a proven leader of Steve's calibre and experience to be our president," said George Huntley, chief operating officer for Theoris Group, parent company of Maetrics. "Since joining the firm in 2013, he has helped shape our go to market strategy and lead our business development efforts. He is a hands-on leader with over 25 years serving clients in the life sciences industry worldwide."

"I am excited to serve this dynamic organization as president," said Cottrell. "Maetrics is uniquely positioned to be the leading provider of enterprise quality and compliance services on an international scale. I look forward to working with our excellent leadership team and our talented employees across the globe as we deliver high quality results to our global client base for years to come."

Now in its 30th year, Maetrics is a leading global life science consulting firm specializing in enterprise compliance services, performance improvement, risk management, organizational change management and information technology for global pharmaceutical, biopharmaceutical and medical device companies.
